

Short Guide for Practitioners: Identifying Child Sexual Exploitation

What is Child Sexual Exploitation (CSE)?

It is child sexual abuse which may involve physical, emotional abuse and neglect. Sexual exploitation includes situations where children and young people exchange sex for shelter, protection, accommodation, food, gifts, alcohol and drugs. Often there may be violence or threats of violence towards the child and they may be coerced to become involved in pornography or abusive images.

Effects of CSE

Sexual exploitation adversely affects the lives of children and impacts on their health, education, self-esteem and causes them to be socially excluded.

Who Are the Victims?

Sexual exploitation involves both girls and boys under the age of 18. Children involved must be regarded as potential victims of abuse. Victims include children from all communities, cultures, some looked after children and victims of human trafficking. Vulnerability and low self-esteem are the most common factors amongst children who are at risk of being sexually exploited. Strong links have been identified between sexual exploitation, running away from home, human trafficking and substance misuse. Increasingly, young people are being sexually exploited by adults and older young people "met" via the Internet. This "hi-tech" method of grooming children for abuse has contributed to the invisibility of the sexual exploitation of children.

Children may be drawn into sexual exploitation by a young person of a similar age. Girls, in particular, are often coerced into sexual exploitation by an older man who targets an individual. They may see him as their boyfriend, and become physically and emotionally dependent upon him. This may be reinforced by the use of alcohol and drugs. Over time, access to friends and family becomes restricted and the child becomes alienated from agencies which may be able to identify and interrupt the abuse. This is often referred to as the grooming process. Child sexual exploitation can occur even if there is no immediate payment or gain, for example, when a child is persuaded to post sexual images on the internet/mobile phones. In all cases those exploiting the child/young person have power over them by virtue of their age, gender, intellect, physical strength and/or economic or other resources (DCSF, 2009). This 'exchange' may also be intangible, in the sense that the young person involved will typically believe that the relationship in which they are involved is a consensual one, and that the abuser(s) are their 'boyfriends'. There are also social and cultural tensions in terms of what is understood to represent a 'consensual' relationship amongst teenagers.

What can you do?

Use this risk assessment framework to help you assess the risk of child sexual exploitation.

- 1 or 2 problems where they live

What to look out for...

Use the list of indicators on the next page to help identify the likelihood of CSE.

Here are some examples:

- * Staying out late or episodes of being missing overnight or longer
- * Concerning use of the internet/mobile phone, Multiple callers (unknown adults/older young people)
- * Evidence of/suspicion of physical or sexual assault; disclosure of assault followed by withdrawal of a reported incident
- * Children under 13 years asking for sexual health advice, Unplanned pregnancy and/or Sexually Transmitted Infections

What to do next?

Follow your usual child protection procedures:

- * Your response to a disclosure.
 - Be calm
 - Tell the young person they have done the right thing by talking to you
 - Do not make any promises to keep a secret
 - Tell them that help is available
- * If you think a young person is a risk of CSE, write down
 - What you have seen
 - What your concerns are and/or
 - What the young person has told you
- * Report your concerns. These people know what to do next
 - Your child protection co-ordinator or line manager
 - The child's named person (Headteacher or Health Visitor)
 - Joint Child Protection Unit 01224 306877
 - Emergency Out of Hours Social Work 01224 693936
 - Police 101
